

Generalgouvernement Warschau

By Stephan Lehnstaedt

In 1915, Germany set up the “Generalgouvernement Warschau”, or General Governorate Warsaw, as the administrative unit for its occupied territories in Russian Poland. Under the leadership of Governor General Hans von Beseler and Wolfgang von Kries, head of the civil administration, the country was exploited. However, in November 1916 an independent kingdom was proclaimed.

Table of Contents

- 1 Two Military Zones
- 2 Administrative Structures
- Selected Bibliography
- Citation

After the conquest of some western territories of Russian Poland in fall 1914 the Germans established control of the industrial city of Lodz and the religious centre of Częstochowa. On 5 January 1915 a civil administration for the German occupied territories was formally erected. It was first run by Felix von Merveldt \(1862-1926\), followed by Hans von Bandenstein \(1870-1950\). Oberst Hans von der Esch \(1862-1934\) was the military delegate from Ober Ost; he later became chief of staff of the Generalgouvernement Warsaw.

Two Military Zones

With further victories in summer 1915, the Polish capital Warsaw was conquered. On 24 August 1915, it became the new administrative headquarters and seat of the Generalgouvernement Warsaw. A smaller part of Poland around the cities of Augustów and Białystok remained under the rule of the military command Ober Ost. The south-eastern part of Congress Poland, directly attached to and encompassing areas east of the Vistula was administered by Austria-Hungary. There, on 25 August 1915, the Militärgeneralgouvernement Kielce was established, renamed on 1 October 1915 to the Militärgeneralgouvernement Lublin, after the largest and most important city in the occupation zone. With 48,000 square kilometres and a population of about 3.5 million, it was much smaller than the German area of 62,000 square kilometres and a population of 6 million. The latter was grouped into eleven governments and thirty-two Kreiskommandos (county commands) that organised social security, traffic, health, and especially the economy, aiming at an exploitation for German benefit. In that respect, Poles had to work in Germany and foodstuff was exported, which led to severe hunger especially in Warsaw and Lodz.

Administrative Structures

In Warsaw, Governor-General Generaloberst Hans von Beseler \(1850-1921\) was directly appointed by and subordinate only to the German Kaiser. Beseler set the political agenda, but the actual implementation and execution of politics was the responsibility of a civil administration now lead by Wolfgang von Kries \(1868-1945\), subordinate to the Berlin Reich authorities and otherwise independent. Beseler officiated until the war ended, Kries until mid-1918. Together they developed a high degree of political continuity and acted relatively unaffected by the frequently changing desires of the military in the Oberste Heeresleitung (OHL), or Supreme Army Command. Local administration played a minor role only after 5 November 1916, when the governors-general in Warsaw and Lublin proclaimed the Kingdom of Poland. As neither Germany nor Austria-Hungary were willing to share their power, the Polish state and later privy council remained without much influence.

German rule in Poland ended on 11 November 1918 with the proclamation of an independent Polish state.

Stephan Lehnstaedt, Deutsches Historisches Institut Warschau

Section Editor: Christoph Nübel

Selected Bibliography

Conze, Werner: Polnische Nation und deutsche Politik im Ersten Weltkrieg, Cologne 1958: Böhlau.

Kries, Wolfgang von: Deutsche Staatsverwaltung in Russisch-Polen, in: Preussische Jahrbücher 233, 1933, pp. 130-158.

Mikietyński, Piotr: Niemiecka droga ku Mitteleuropie. Polityka II Rzeszy wobec Królestwa Polskiego, 1914-1916 (The German way to Mitteleuropa. The politics of the Second Reich and the Kingdom of Poland, 1914-1916), Krakow 2009: Towarzystwo Wydawnicze Historia Jagiellonica.

Spät, Robert Michael: Für eine gemeinsame deutsch-polnische Zukunft? Hans Hartwig von Beseler als Generalgouverneur in Polen 1915-1918, in: Zeitschrift für Ostmitteleuropa-Forschung 58, 2009, pp. 469-500.

Stempin, Arkadiusz: General-pułkownik Hans Hartwig von Beseler - generalny gubernator warszawski w latach 1915-1918 (Colonel general Hans Hartwig von Beseler – Warsaw's Governor General in the years 1915-1918), in: Dzieje Najnowsze 43/3, 2011, pp. 21-34.

Szwarc, Wojciech: Podział administracyjny dla celów niemieckiej administracji okupacyjnej i stosunki ludnościowe w GG Warszawskim 1915-1918 (The administrative division for the aims of the German occupational administration and the relations to the population in GG Warsaw 1915-1918), in: Studia Historica Slavo-Germanica 5, 1976, pp. 73-94.

Citation

Lehnstaedt, Stephan: Generalgouvernement Warschau , in: 1914-1918-online. International Encyclopedia of the First World War, ed. by Ute Daniel, Peter Gatrell, Oliver Janz, Heather Jones, Jennifer Keene, Alan Kramer, and Bill Nasson, issued by Freie Universität Berlin, Berlin 2014-10-08. DOI: 10.15463/ie1418.10047.

License

This text is licensed under: CC by-NC-ND 3.0 Germany - Attribution, Non-commercial, No Derivative Works.