

French, John Denton Pinkstone, Earl of Ypres

By Nicholas Lloyd

Sir John French (1852-1925)

Field Marshal Sir John French, Earl of Ypres, was commander of the British Expeditionary Force from the beginning of World War One until December 1915.

Vandyk, C., n.d., n.p.

IWM (Q 69149), <http://www.iwm.org.uk/collections/item/object/205016677>.

French, John Denton Pinkstone

(1st Earl of Ypres)

British Army Officer

Born 28 September 1852 in Ripple Vale, Great Britain

Died 22 May 1925 in Deal Castle, Great Britain

Summary

Sir John French was the commander of the British Expeditionary Force between July 1914 and December 1915.

Table of contents

1 Introduction

2 World War I

3 Conclusion

Selected Bibliography Citation

Introduction

Sir John French, 1st Earl of Ypres (1852-1925), commanded the British Expeditionary Force from 30 July 1914 to 18 December 1915. French was a hard-riding cavalryman, whose exploits during the South African War – when troops under his command relieved Kimberley – had made him one of the most famous soldiers in the Empire. He was appointed Chief of the Imperial General Staff in 1912 and on the outbreak of war was given command of the Expeditionary Force. He was authorized by the Secretary of War, Lord Horatio Herbert Kitchener \(1850-1916\), to cooperate with the French Army, but not to endanger the BEF – a somewhat paradoxical set of instructions that required diplomacy, tact and an unflappable temperament.

World War I

French was never a natural fit for such an onerous position. His personal courage was not in doubt, but he was temperamental and at times petty and highly-strung. He also waged an on-off feud with General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien \(1858-1930\) throughout 1914-1915, which displayed a depressing lack of professionalism. When Smith-Dorrien (GOC II Corps) disobeyed his orders to stand and fight a desperate (although undoubtedly correct) rearguard action at Le Cateau on 26 August 1914, French marked him out as dangerous and disloyal. The two clashed repeatedly during the Second Battle of Ypres in April and May 1915, after Smith-Dorrien questioned his orders about making repeated, fruitless counter-attacks and the need to retreat. After being constantly undermined, Smith-Dorrien resigned on 6 May.

French struggled to deal with the vast responsibilities and changed circumstances of war on the Western Front throughout 1914-1915. He took the loss of friends and the destruction of the old Regular Army badly, and by the summer of 1915 he was visibly declining. French's final battle, Loos in September 1915, was symptomatic of these troubles. The operational commander, Sir Douglas Haig \(1861-1928\) (GOC First Army), became convinced that the attack at Loos should go "all-out" and aim for a breakthrough, which he believed could be facilitated by using chlorine gas to precede the assault. Sir John would have preferred a more limited and proportional offensive, but found himself either unwilling or unable to insist upon this, letting a serious divergence of opinion emerge between himself and Haig over the scope and aims of the attack. Nevertheless, French kept control of the General Reserve – two divisions of XI Corps – which he used as a lever to control the increasingly independently-minded Haig. When the General Reserve was unable to intervene on the first day, Sir John was blamed for holding them too far in the rear and thus denying the BEF a breakthrough.

Conclusion

The fiasco of the reserves would prove to be French's downfall. His despatch in The Times on 2 November 1915 contained basic errors on the timing and control of the reserves and provoked an angry response from Haig, who had opened a full-blown whispering campaign against his chief. Increasingly powerful voices in London were also beginning to share his concerns about French's suitability, and he was relieved of command on 18 December 1915. French never forgave Haig for this betrayal. He returned to Britain as Commander-in-Chief Home Forces, but spent his time nursing his grievances, publishing his memoirs, 1914, in 1919. He died in 1925.

Nick Lloyd, King's College London at the Joint Services Command & Staff College

Selected Bibliography

- Cassar, George H.: The tragedy of Sir John French, Newark; London, 1985: University of Delaware Press; Associated University Presses.
- French, John Denton Pinkstone: 1914, London, 1919: Constable and Co.
- Holmes, Richard: The little Field-Marshal, Sir John French, London, 1981: J. Cape.
- Lloyd, Nick: Loos 1915, Stroud, 2006: Tempus.
- Philpott, William: The strategic ideas of Sir John French, in: Journal of Strategic Studies 12/4, 1989.

Citation

Nicholas Lloyd: French, John Denton Pinkstone, Earl of Ypres, in: 1914-1918-online. International Encyclopedia of the First World War, ed. by Ute Daniel, Peter Gatrell, Oliver Janz, Heather Jones, Jennifer D. Keene, Alan Kramer, and Bill Nasson, issued by Freie Universität Berlin, Berlin 2015-02-13. DOI: 10.15463/ie1418.10551

External Links

- French, John Denton Pinkstone: 1914, Boston 1919 \(Internet Archive\) \(Book\)
- French, John Denton Pinkstone: The despatches of Lord French, London 1917 \(Internet Archive\) \(Book\)
- French, John Denton Pinkstone: The Germans and the small nations - an interview with Lord French, London 1917 \(Internet Archive\) \(Book\)
- John Denton Pinkstone French, 1st Earl of Ypres \(National Portrait Gallery\) \(Database\)
- John French, 1st earl of Ypres \(Encyclopædia Britannica\) \(Article\)

Metadata

Regional Section(s)

Western Europe > Great Britain and Ireland > Great Britain

Thematic Section(s)

Violence

Subjects

Warfare and the military > Battles, battlefields and campaigns > Battles, battlefields and campaigns, Western Front

Warfare and the military > Combatants > Cavalry

Warfare and the military > Command and control > Command structures

Warfare and the military > Command and control > Officers

Author Keywords

British Expeditionary Force; Western Front; command; leadership; generals

GND Subject Headings

French, John Denton Pinkstone of Ypres

LC Subject Headings

French, John Denton Pinkstone, Earl of Ypres, 1852-1925

Rameau Subject Headings

John French \(1852-1925\)

Key Person(s)

Smith-Dorrien, Horace; Kitchener, Horatio Herbert Kitchener, Earl; Haig, Douglas

Key Location(s)

Ypres; Loos; Kimberley; Ripple Vale, England; Deal Castle, England

Title

French, John Denton Pinkstone, Earl of Ypres

Author(s)

Nicholas Lloyd

Article Type

Encyclopedic Entry

Classification Group

Persons