Gallieni, Joseph-Simon

By Julie d'Andurain

Summary

General Joseph-Simon Gallieni was a colonial officer who became the Governor of Paris in 1914 and Minister of War in 1915.

Table of contents

1 Before World War I
2 During World War I
Notes
Selected Bibliography
Citation

Before World War I

As a young officer, Joseph-Simon Gallieni (1849-1916) left the French military school of Saint-Cyr at the beginning of the Franco-Prussian War in 1870, during which he was captured. Following the war, Gallieni pursued his entire career in the French colonies, including French Sudan, where he fought the great African leaders Mamadou Lamine Dramé (1840-1887) and Samori Ture (1830-1900). Promoted to colonel, he was sent to Tonkin (French Indochina) for four years between 1892 and 1896, where he had Hubert Lyautey (1854-1934) under his command. Together with Lyautey, Gallieni annihilated piracy and began to develop his colonial method. Known as the “oil spot,” this method was formalized in Madagascar between 1896 and 1905. The policy was not to proceed using penetrating columns, which was considered unnecessarily destructive, but rather to extend colonial expansion gradually after complete pacification. By practicing an indigenous policy he called the “politics of race,” the policy sought to ensure the cooperation of traditional leaders.

During World War I

After 1905, he became a corps commander in France and held numerous honorary positions before retiring in April 1914. Recalled in August 1914, he became Governor of Paris and organized the defence of the capital. He said that he had “received the mandate to defend Paris against the invader. This mandate, I will fill it to the end.” He transformed the capital to defend it but increasingly faced confrontation with Joseph Joffre (1852-1931), his former subordinate to whom he now owed obedience. Appointed Minister of War in October 1915, Gallieni decided to protect the colonial troops – mainly “tirailleurs sénégalais” – from the harsh winter by creating “winter camps” in southern France. Suffering from cancer, he died on 27 May 1916, following a surgery. He received a state funeral and was raised to the dignity of Marshal of France posthumously on 7 May 1921.

Julie d’Andurain, École Militaire/Paris-Sorbonne

Notes

Selected Bibliography

Citation

External Links

- First Battle of the Marne begins, 2009 (History.com) (Article)
- Gallieni, Joseph-Simon: Neuf ans à Madagascar, 1906 (Gallica) (Book)
- Gallieni, Joseph-Simon: Rapport d'ensemble sur la pacification, l'organisation et la colonisation de Madagascar, Paris 1900 (Gallica) (Book)
- Gallieni, Joseph-Simon: Voyage au Soudan français, Paris 1885 (Gallica) (Book)
- Lyautey, Hubert: Du rôle colonial de l'armée, Paris 1900 (Gallica) (Book)

Metadata

Regional Section(s)
Western Europe > France

Thematic Section(s)
Power
Violence

Subjects
Politics, law > International relations > Colonialism, imperialism
Warfare and the military > Command and control > Officers
Warfare and the military > Military planning and recruitment > Strategies, military

Author Keywords
colonial officer; Africa; Tonkin; Governor of Paris; Battle of Marne; tirailleurs sénégalais

GND Subject Headings

LC Subject Headings

Key Person(s)
Mamadou Lamine Dramé; Joseph Jacques Césaire Joffre; Louis Hubert Gonzalve Lyautey (1854-1934); Samori Ture

Key Location(s)
Saint-Béat; Versailles; Paris

Title
Gallieni, Joseph-Simon

Author(s)
Julie d'Andurain

Article Type
Encyclopedic Entry
Classification Group
Persons